One of Quay's Tricks.

It was all along understood that Boss Quay favored Senator Mylin for Auditor General and Speaker Thompson for State Treasurer; but it is now given out that he will not interfere or demand his favorites! This is to shut the eyes of the anti Quay Republicans; but the game is entirely transparent and leads a prominent Philadelphia independent to remark: "It is quite amusing to watch the side-shows and by-plays of Senator Quay and his friends to mislead the public; and it is almost certain to prove about as successful as the efforts of the ostrich to conceal its body by hiding its head in the sand. The convention to be held at Harrisburg on August 19 will be as completely under Quay's domination as was the convention last year when Delamater was nominated. Quay himself will be absent, just as he was absent last year; but it will be Quay's convention, Quay's Chairman, Quay's candidates and Quay's platform. Pains will be taken through the newspapers to conceal the fact; but the outcome will be exactly what Quay either wishes or approves. If he wins he will be stronger than ever; if he loses he will be broken. Quay himself appreciates this, and he will give desperate battle with the people to continue the supremacy of Quayism in Pennsylvania."

It will probably be Gen. Gregg for Auditor General.

Independent Office-Holder.

The following is good reading, being the card of Col. Erhardt, collector of the port of New York, the most important customs office in the country, resigning the office. Read his reasons, which place another blot on the character of the Republican party. He says:

"I have resigned because the Collector has been reduced to a position where he is no longer an independent officer with authority commensurate with his responsibility. I have given bonds for $200,000. I have received for the Government during the twenty months last past $522,697,135.40, and I am all the time personally responsible for enormous values in money and merchandise. My duties are necessarily performed through about 1,500 employes. I am not willing to continue to be responsible for their conduct unless I can have proper authority over them. The recent policy of the Treasury Department has been to control the details of the Customs administration at the Port of New York from Washington, at the dictate of a private individual having no official responsibility. The Collector is practically deprived of power and control, while he is left subject to all responsibility. The office is no longer independent, and I am. Therefore we have separated."

A reform in custom-house management is imperatively demanded, and to a Democratic administration alone is it worth while to entrust the duty. There is no good in the present Republican machine.

STATE CHAIRMAN KERR tells the Harrisburg Patriot that he will not be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Treasurer, but is a candidate for Clerk of the House of Representatives at Washington.

THE California tin mines are being developed by English management, and yet we are told that we must willingly pay $1 00 a box in addition to the former price for roofing tin, because we are thereby aiding an American industry. It looks to a man up a tree as if the aid was about equally divided between the English capitalist and the Welsh tin-plate manufacturer, while it is all contributed by the American consumer.

SECRETARY TRACY has found it necessary to publish a letter explaining why he awarded the contract for building Cruiser number 13 to a firm that was not the lowest responsible bidder. No administration has ever made as many explanations as the present one. The actions of all administrations should be of such nature as to need no explanation, for explanations are always the parents of suspicion.

YORK liverymen talk of adopting the newly invented indicator, which shows the number of miles traversed by vehicles. They can easily be attached to any wagon. At a glance they can tell whether their horses have been driven at a reasonable speed or not.

MR. MORTON C. CURRENS has purchased from Miss Mary Cadwalader for $800 cash, the Ann Penrose property in Huntington township.

GEORGE KENNAN has written an article on "A Winter Journey through Siberia," for the September Century. It is a description of a part of his return journey from Irkutsk, the capital of Eastern Siberia, after his famous investigation of the convict system. As Mr. Kennan was carrying a great mass of documents, letters, and politically incendiary material on this trip, and as he believed himself to be an object of considerable suspicion to the police, the journey was by no means devoid of exciting incident.

CONGRESSMAN George D. Tillman, the brother of the former Governor of South Carolina, spoke at an alliance meeting at Perkville, in that State, on Thursday week. He said that if the alliance at the South wants to serve its friends at the North let it give its support to Governor Campbell, of Ohio. He denounces Dr. C. W. Macune and said Senator Peffer is a hater of Southern men. The third party, he said, was projected by political assassins and culprits.

THE Philadelphia Press, whose editor, Charles Emory Smith, is Harrison's appointee as minister to Russia, comes out with a heavy "smite" of Quay and Cameron for deserting Harrison. Evidently the Pennsylvania machine means punishment of Harrison for slights felt by the two bosses.

UNDERDONE cakes in the course of time will batter down any man's stomach.

Abolition of British Slavery.

The subjoined article is written in answer to the question of a correspondent of the COMPILER relative to the termination of slavery in the British provinces. Notwithstanding the facts, generally known, that the English colonies swarmed with slaves in miserable condition, and that English traders were so profitably engaged in the trade as to require the penalty of death to be attached to the act for the abolition of the slave trade, yet Great Britain's most eminent jurist, in 1758, wrote this: "The spirit of liberty is so deeply implanted in our constitution, and rooted in our very soil, that a slave or a negro, the moment he lands in England, falls under the protection of the laws and so far becomes a freeman. Upon these principles the law of England abhors, and will not endure the existence of slavery within this nation."

The explanation of this, at least, seeming inconsistency, lies in this, that within the borders of England, exclusive of her possessions outside, slavery has not been permitted since the time of the first Norman King, William the Conqueror. At the same time, however, her merchants inside of England and outside, largely controlled the African trade. The treatment of owners and traders in the colonies called forth petition after petition to Parliament for redress of this national evil. The formation of a London society of philanthropists, in 1787, for the suppression of the traffic, was the first step in reform. In 1788 the Crown issued an order of inquiry into the condition of the slave trade. Then followed a prohibition of slavery in the conquered colonies. Lord Howick (Earl Grey) introduced the general abolition bill in 1807, making all slave trade illegal after Jan. 1st, 1808. It passed both houses and received the royal signature. Owing, however, to the leniency of the penalty for the infringement of the act, it was inadequate for its purpose. By the act of 1811, therefore, this penalty was made felony, punishable with fourteen years' transportation. But this seems to have been insufficient, for the act of 1824 declared it piracy, and, as such, punishable with death. Afterward, in 1837, this was mitigated, leaving it transportation for life.

The reader will observe that the abolition of the slave trade was not the emancipation of slaves. They were two different and separate acts. As England abolished the trade in 1807, so did the United States, soon after, in 1808. It was in 1865 that our constitutional amendments were adopted, two years subsequent to Mr. Lincoln's proclamation of January 1st, 1863. So it was not until 1833 that England made her statute, whereby the system of slavery which was still in existence, though the slave trade had been suppressed, was abolished at a cost of 20,000,000 pounds sterling in compensation to owners. This was during the reign of William the Fourth.

Soon after England's reform, similar measures were adopted by the more important of the South American Republics, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, and later, by France. In 1841 the Quintuple Treaty was made between some of the European powers and subsequently ratified by almost all of them. So general has been the movement in the same direction that, at present, slavery will be found in but a few Spanish and Portuguese colonies.

The G. A. R.

Gen. W. H. H. Davis, a prominent officer in the late war, endorses the suggestion of the Public Ledger that Grand Army Encampments and other Jollification's "leave little behind of permanent value," and then continues in his Doylestown Democrat, as follows: "As a matter of fact they leave nothing that will benefit the future historian when he comes to write up the history of the Great War. The survivors should write down a brief and concise account of the part they individually took in the war, and file it away in the archives of the Grand Army Post or Commandery of the Loyal Legion to which they belong. This would leave something 'behind of permanent value.' What a record it would present to future generations when the history of the Legion and the Posts shall be written. It would be invaluable. Now is the time to preserve all that can be gotten; much has been lost by the death of the actors, but enough can yet be obtained to make the record rich beyond compare."

AMELIE RIVES AGAIN.—A cablegram announces that Amelie Rives has sailed for the United States where she will arrive soon after the appearance of her latest novel in the August number of the Cosmopolitan. After nearly two years of silence the new story of Miss Rives will be received with the greatest interest by those who enjoyed her earlier work. Married, travelled and in every way matured, her latest production is said to be worthy of the talent which gave such great promise. The scene is laid in Paris, where the author has been living for two years, and the heroine is a Virginia girl who is studying music abroad with a negro servant for a chaperone. The story has been illustrated by Kate Greatorex, one of the most promising of American painters in Paris, and a charming portrait of Miss Rives is the frontispiece of the magazine.

FRANK MCLAUGHLIN, the Philadelphia publisher, says he thinks Franklin B. Gowen committed suicide because of his disappointment at not being able to rid the Reading Railroad Company of debt and restore to his friends the money they had invested on his advice. It may or may not be a deplorable fact that most railroad wreckers are not so sensitive.

ONE LESS AT HOME.

One less at home!
The charmed circle broken; a dear face
Missed day by day from its accustomed place;
But, cleansed and saved and perfected by grace,
One more in Heaven!

One less at home!
One voice of welcome hushed, and evermore
One farewell word unspoken; on the shore
Where parting comes not, one soul landed more,
One more in Heaven!

One less at home!
A sense of loss that meets us at the gate;
Within, a place unfilled and desolate;
And far away, our coming to await,
One more in Heaven!

One less at home!
Chill as the earth-born mist the thought would rise
And wrap our footsteps round and dim our eyes;
But the bright sunbeam darteth from the skies—
One more in Heaven!

One more at home!
This is not home, where, cramped in earthly mold,
Our sight of Christ is dim, our love is cold;
But there, where face to face we shall behold,
Is home and Heaven!

One less on earth!
Its pains, its sorrow and its toil to share;
One less the pilgrim's cross to bear;
One more the crown of ransomed soul to wear,
At home in Heaven!

One more in Heaven!
Another thought to brighten cloudy days,
Another theme for thankfulness and praise,
Another link on high our souls to raise
To home in Heaven!

One more at home—
That home where separation can not be,
That home where none are missed eternally,
Lord Jesus, grant us all a place with Thee,
At home in Heaven!

DAPPLE'S MISTRESS.

BY EMMA G. JONES

"Stop, Dapple; we must look to this."

The scene was a green stretch of summer lawn in front of a fine old Virginia farm house, the speaker a slight, bright-faced girl, gracefully mounted on a small gray pony.

The sun was dropping out of sight behind the green hill, and far away, down the silver bend of the Accocek came the tramp of retreating troops, with now and then the muffled roll of a drum or the shrill bray of a bugle.

Old Virginia, the queen-mother of the sunny South, was overrun with soldiers, devastated by fire and sword, shaken to her very foundations by the thunders of civil war.

Colonel Moreton was far away from his pleasant home, in the front ranks of death and danger; but Irene, his only child, still braved the terrors of invasion, and remained at the farm-house with her invalid mother and a few faithful old servants.

Cantering across the grounds, an hour after the retreat of the invading troops, something attracted the young lady's notice—a prostrate figure under the shade of the great cottonwood tree.

"Stop, Dapple, we must look to this!"

Dapple stopped and Miss Irene leaped lightly from her saddle, and throwing the silken reins over the pony's neck, she went tripping across the grounds to the spot where the figure lay.

It was a tall, soldierly figure clad in army blue, with a pale, worn face, and an abundance of curling, chestnut hair.

Colonel Moreton's daughter looked down upon the senseless soldier with all her woman's divine compassion stirring within her bosom.

"Poor fellow," she murmured, laying her soft hand upon his brow; "I wish I could help him."

The soft voice and the softer touch called back the veteran's wandering senses. He opened his eyes and looked up in the young lady's face. Great, luminous, handsome eyes they were, that somehow reminded Irene of her brother Tom's eyes; and Tom was down in the trenches in front of Richmond. The compassion in her heart stirred afresh; she smoothed back the tangled curls from the soldier's brow.

"My poor fellow," she said, "can I do anything for you?"

He struggled up on his elbow with a stifled groan.

"My horse threw me," he explained, "and they left me behind. I think I must have fainted from the pain. I thank you very much, but I can't see how you can help me. I suppose I must lie here till they take me prisoner, and I'd almost as soon be shot."

Irene smiled, a smile that lighted her dark, bright face into positive beauty.

"I am in the enemy's country," she said, "but if you will trust me I think I can help you; at least I will see that you are refreshed and made comfortable."

She put her hand to her bosom, and drawing forth a tiny silver whistle she put it to her lips and blew a sharp little blast.

Dapple pricked up her gray ears and came cantering to her side, followed instantly by a colored man-servant.

"You see," smiled Miss Irene, flashing a beaming glance on the soldier, "I hold my reserve forces at a moment's warning. Here, James, help this gentleman to the house, and then ride for Doctor Werter to dress his limb."

James obeyed without a word, and by the time the sun was fairly out of sight the Union soldier, refreshed and made comfortable, lay asleep in the best chamber of the pleasant old Southern mansion.

Meanwhile, on the long veranda, Irene kept watch, her slight, willowy figure wrapped in a scarlet mantle, her flossy, raven tresses floating on the winds.

By and by, as the midnight stars came out and glittered overhead, above the murmur and rustle of the forest leaves, arose the clash and clang, the roar and tramp of advancing troops.

Irene's dark face flushed, and her lustrous eyes dilated. She crossed the veranda with a swift step and tapped lightly at the door of her guest's chamber.

"They are coming," she whispered; "they will take you prisoner if you remain. You must go."

The soldier started to his feet and made his way out, but he reeled against the door-post, faint and gasping for breath.

"I can't walk!" he cried; "there's no hope of escape!"

But Irene held out her lithe, young arm.

"Yes there is," she said cheerfully. "Lean on me; I can help you down and you shall ride Dapple. He knows the river-road, and you shall overtake your comrades by dawn. Hurry! there is no time to lose!"

The soldier leaned upon the brave, helpful young arm, and succeeded in reaching the lawn below.

"Dapple!" the young girl called, in her clear, silvery notes, "come here!"

In a breath Dapple was at her side. The girl stood and looked at the gentle creature, and then threw her arms about his neck.

"Oh, Dapple, pretty Dapple," she sobbed, "it breaks my heart to part with you. Good-by, Dapple!"

In the next breath she stood erect, her eyes flashing through a mist of tears.

"Come, sir," she said, "allow me to help you to mount. Dapple, take this gentleman down the river-road, and at your utmost speed."

Dapple uttered a sagacious whinny, but the soldier hesitated.

"Why don't you mount, sir?" cried the girl, impatiently. "Will you remain here and ruin both yourself and me?"

He vaulted into the saddle without a word.

"Away, Dapple, like the wind!" cried Irene, and the little mountain pony shot off like an arrow.

* * * * * * *

The war was over, and once more over the blasted and desolated homes of Virginia peace and freedom reigned.

Captain Rutherford made it his business to go back to the Potomac hills, and to Col. Morton's farm-house the moment he was discharged from service; but where the stately old homestead stood he found nothing but a mass of ruins, and of Dapple's mistress not the slightest tidings could be obtain.

Three years went by, and the ex-captain found himself the wealthy heir of an old uncle, and took himself off on a tour amid the Swiss mountains. Dapple went with him, as he always did since that eventful night when the brave little pony bore him safely beyond reach of the enemy. He had been the captain's inseparable companion in all his wanderings. She was with him now, ambling over the green Tyrol valleys and climbing the steep Switzer stepes.

One September afternoon, when the captain's tour was drawing to a close, somewhere in the vicinity of Mont Blanc, he fell in with a traveling party from New Orleans. It consisted of Madame Lenoir, her son and two daughters, and a young American lady who was her companion and interpreter.

Captain Rutherford found madam a charming woman, and while the young persons of the party busied themselves in spreading out a collation under the trees, he lay amid the long, rustling grasses, listening to madam's pretty feminine chatter, and in his turn relating incidents and reminiscences of his own war experience for her edification.

Among other things he told her of Dapple, and his midnight ride among the blue hills of old Virginia.

Madam was intensely interested.

"And the gallant little pony carried you safely through?" she cried, with beaming eyes.

"Safely through, madam, with the enemy at my very heels," replied the captain.

"Miss Moreton," cried madam, "will you have the kindness to pass the coffee? And pray, Captain Rotherford, what ever became of Dapple?"

The captain raised himself to a sitting posture.

"Dapple, Dapple," he called, "come here!"

From the forest shadows near at hand a small gray mountain pony came ambling forth. Madam Lenoir's companion, advancing with the coffee pot in her slim white hand, uttered a sharp little cry, and wasted all the coffee on the rustling leaves at her feet.

"Oh, Dapple, Dapple!" she cried.

Dapple heard the sweet voice and knew it in an instant. She broke into a joyous neigh, and shot like an arrow for the young lady's side. She caught her shaggy head and held it close to her bosom, sobbing like the silly child she was.

"Oh, Dapple, my pretty Dapple, have I found you at last?"

Madame Lenoir, comprehending the denouement, looked on with glistening eyes.

Two weeks later the pleasant party was breaking up. Madame and her party were going back to France.

"And now, Irene," said the captain, "how is it to be? You will not listen to my suit or accept my love? Then you will be forced to part from Dapple again. She is mine by the right of possession. I cannot give her up. Come, now, give me your final decision—are you willing to part from me and Dapple forever?"

Irene looked up with her old glorifying smile.

"I could bear to part from you," she said, wickedly, "but never again from Dapple. If you take Dapple you will have to take her mistress, too, Captain Rutherford."

And the captain made no objection. A month later saw Dapple's mistress his wife.

What He Didn't Have.

He had a lot of fly traps strung over his shoulder, and as he heaved in sight through the alley gate the lady of the house saw him from the kitchen window and laid for him.

"Good afternoon, mum," he said, taking off the traps and spreading them at her feet as she stood in the doorway. "I have here a"——

"Yes, I see," she interrupted, "but I don't want them. Have you a machine that will make old eggs fresh again?"

"No, mum," replied the astonished peddler, "I"——

"Well, then, have you any freezers that will make warm ice cream?"

"No, mum, I"——

"No? Have you any recipes for making strong butter weak?"

"No, mum, but I"——

"No? Have you any scales that will make heavy bread light?"

"No'm, not to"——

"Indeed? Have you any spectacles for cross-eyed potatoes?"

"Well, mum, it's this way, you"——

"Certainly I do. Have you a nice, light straw hat for the head of the kitchen flour barrel?"

"No, I"——

"Gracious me!" she exclaimed sharply. "What have you got, anyway? Nothing in the line of vats in which to tan a tomato skin, have you?"

The man began to gather his traps together hurriedly.

"What's the matter?" she asked, pleasantly. "Aren't you going to let me have a"——

"Nothing, mum, nothing," he muttered, "except the whole back yard to yourself, and may Heaven bless you and keep you in it," and he fled out and slammed the alley gate as she smiled softly to herself and resumed her work peeling potatoes.—Detroit Free Press.

JACK AGAIN.—An old woman named Wolfe was attacked in a dark alley of the Whitechapel district of London by an unknown man, believed to be "Jack the Ripper," who with a sharp knife inflicted a terrible wound across her throat and stabbed her a number of times in the body. The woman is in a hospital.

Honoring Parents.

As a stranger went into the church yard of a pretty village, he beheld three children at a newly-made grave. A boy about ten years of age was busily engaged in placing plats of turf about it, while a girl who appeared a year or two younger held in her apron a few roots of wild flowers. The third child, still younger, was sitting on the grass, watching with thoughtful look, the movements of the other two. There were pieces of crape on their straw hats, and a few other signs of mourning, such as are sometimes worn by the poor, who struggle between their poverty and their afflictions.

The girl began by planting some of her wild flowers around the head of the grave, when the stranger thus addressed them:

"Whose grave is this, children, about which you are so busily engaged?"

"Mother's grave, sir," said the boy.

"And did your father send you to place these flowers around your mother's grave?"

"No, sir, father lies here, too, and little Willie and sister Jane."

"When did they die?"

"Mother was buried a fortnight ago yesterday, sir, but father died last winter; they all lie here."

"Then who told you to do this."

"Nobody, sir."

"Then why do you do it?"

They appeared at a loss for an answer; but the stranger looked so kindly at them, that at length the eldest replied, as the tears started to his eyes: "Oh, we do love them, sir."

"Then you put these grass tufts and wild flowers where your parents are laid because you love them?"

"Yes, sir," they all eagerly replied.

What can be more beautiful than such an exhibition of children honoring deceased parents? Never forget the dear parents who loved and cherished you in your infant days. Ever remember their parental kindness. Honor their memory by doing those things which you know would please them when alive, by a particular regard to their dying commands, and carrying on their plans of usefulness. Are your parents spared to you? Ever treat them as you will wish you had done, when you stand a lonely orphan at their graves. How will a remembrance of kind, affectionate conduct toward these departed friends, then help to soothe your grief and heal your wounded heart.

HAVOC CAUSED BY A STORM.—When the circus tent was blown down by the wind storm at Washburn, Wis., on Saturday week, Prof. Williams was exhibiting his trained horses. The animals dashed through the crowd of spectators, tramping many children under foot.

One more of the victims died Sunday. The tent of the circus was carried fully a mile into the woods. All of the animals which escaped were recaptured on Sunday after an exciting chase except the Bengal tigers and an anaconda, which are still at large.

A large bear was caught behind a restaurant eating peanut shells. Two bisons were captured and led back like pet dogs. One of the elephants became mired in a bog and was badly injured. The total damage is estimated at about $30,000.

UNCLE SAM'S LAND.—At the close of the revolutionary war, when our independence was acknowledged, the treaty of peace made with Great Britain ceded to America territory to the extent of 815,615 square miles. Since then other territory has been added as follows: Louisiana, purchased from France in 1803, 930,938 square miles; Florida, from Spain, in 1821, 59,268 square miles; Texas, annexed in 1845, 237,504 square miles; Oregon, by a treaty in 1846, 380,425 square miles; California, conquered from Mexico in 1847–8, 649,762 square miles; Arizona, acquired from Mexico in 1854, 27,500 square miles; Alaska, purchased from Russia in 1867, 577,390 square miles. This gives a total of 3,678 392 square miles of territory now embraced in the United States, being about four-ninths of all North America, and more than one-fifteenth of the entire land surface of the globe.

READY!—A colored laborer was standing with his pickax uplifted, still as any statue, the other evening. A passerby watched him for a few seconds and then asked:

"What are you standing that way for, John?"

"Does you know what time 'tis?" asked the colored man.

"No, not exactly."

"Well, I done jes sont er boy to fin' out. I's hollen de pick dissher way foh convenience. Ef de repoht comes back dat it's 'befoh 6 er clock' I kin drap it in de groun', and if it comes back 'after 6 er clock,' I kin drap it on ma shoulder."

IT PAYS TO BE HONEST.—The editor of the Independence (Kas.) Star sued a delinquent subscriber for eleven dollars. The delinquent claimed that he never subscribed for the paper and did not propose to pay. The Judge instructed the jury that if the evidence disclosed the fact that the delinquent had taken the paper from the office or caused it to be taken, they should find for the plaintiff. It cost the man nearly a hundred dollars to settle what eleven dollars would have paid. It pays to be honest even with the printers.

COULD anything be more interesting than to trace the progress of a dream, if it were only possible? Think of the variety of experiences through which one would be conveyed, untrammeled by the limitations of common sense which restrict one's waking thoughts, and freed from the moral responsibilities that encumber the doings of ordinary life. Probability sets no bounds to the dreamer's vision, and even conscience is dormant, since the most righteous of men do, on occasions, misbehave themselves most shockingly in the strange Land of Nod.

MISS EMMA R. STEINER, of Baltimore, well-known in this place, has composed and written an operetta-comedy, in two acts, entitled "Fleurette." Miss Steiner did all the work on the piece, even the scoring of the music for the orchestra. The operetta will be produced at the Standard Theatre, New York, next Monday evening, and Miss Steiner will lead the orchestra. This is the first operetta ever produced by a lady in this country, and its production next Monday is quite a stage event.

The Foolish Sheep.

"No animal that walks on four legs is as big a fool as a sheep," says a sheep raiser. "We have to watch them every minute and if vigilance is relaxed for an instant the entire flock is likely to practically commit suicide. In handling most animals some degree of self-help or intelligence can be relied on to aid the owner in saving their lives, but sheep seem to set deliberately to work to kill themselves. If caught in a storm on the plains they will drift before the wind and die of cold and exposure rather than move 100 yards to windward to obtain shelter in their corral. To drive sheep against the wind is absolutely impossible. I once lost over 1,000 head because I could not drive them to a corral not 200 feet away. In the corral they are still more foolish. If a storm comes up they all move 'down wind' until stopped by the fence. Then begins the proceedings so much dreaded by sheepmen, known as 'piling.' The sheep will climb over each other's backs until they are heaped up ten feet high. Of course, all those at the bottom are smothered. Not one has sense enough to seek shelter under the lee of the fence, as a horse or dog would do. Again, if a sheep gets into a quicksand its fate teaches nothing to those who come immediately after, but the whole flock will follow its leader to destruction. No more exasperatingly stupid brute than a sheep walks."—San Francisco Chronicle.

AN ANECDOTE OF GENERAL SHERMAN.—An anecdote of General Sherman is related in the Boston Beacon. It is not a new one, but is well worth repeating nevertheless. A woman was trying to induce him to use his influence for her son in order that he might be given a place in the army, for which, however, he had shown no particular fitness. "His father was in the army," said the urgent mother, "and so were his grandfather and his great-grandfather, and it seems as if he ought to follow the line." "Hm! Three generations in the army," said the general. "Don't you think, madam, that it is about time for one member of the family to work for his living?"

More Yellowstone Notes.

Every season the Yellowstone Park has its hundred of "camping" visitors, who spend weeks within its limits, to enjoy the high and dry air and the innumerable wonders presented on every hand. The way to go into "camp" is to hire an outfit, say at Livingston—two horses and a driver, a stout wagon, with tent and blankets, cooking utensils and "grub." A gun is always a dangerous thing to carry, but in the Yellowstone Park there are two added "dangers," that of losing the gun and expulsion from the entire premises—which, as before stated, are 75 by 85 miles.

Tourists are allowed to fish with hook and line as much as they may have taste for, but many of the streams are warm and filled with mineral odors to such an extent as to render them unfit for fish life.

A story is told that along the Yellowstone Lake there is a point with cold water to invite the trout on one side of a narrow neck of land, and water hot enough to cook it on the other. The fish never leaves the hook until the skeleton has become "food for (other) fishes." The fellow who saw all this with his own eyes didn't come down himself. He sent a man.

Half a dozen gentlemen of our party indulged in a "fly" on the Yellowstone, but the "catches" were no larger than Jerry Carbaugh's in Marsh creek, though the trout were; two or three covering sixteen to eighteen inches apiece. Each had a host of owners; but there were none so poor as to have any knowledge of a forlorn little four-incher that should never have left the hook but to be returned to its native element.—What a variety of human nature there is in a tourist party of ten, or twenty, or a hundred. Numbers rarely alter proportions.

The reader must go back with us to sights altogether new or only touched upon before. First pause in front of the Obsidian Cliff, said to be the purest native glass in the world, and so hard as to defy the best diamonds to drill it. Indeed, the story is related that when the government engineers had decided upon cutting a driving road along the stream at the foot of the cliff, they soon found that all drills had to be abandoned, and that the breaking of the glass had to be done by heating the surface with wood fires and suddenly dashing water upon it. By this means the glass was cracked on top and a road eight or ten feet wide, by about one hundred in length, secured, but at great expense.—And yet the Indian knew how to "pound" the sharpest kind of arrow heads out of this stubborn material.

The water in the Mammoth Hot Springs is clear as crystal and boiling hot, and it comes gushing out in great streams at many places over an expanse of nearly 200 acres. It is strongly impregnated with lime, sulphur and other minerals, and the deposits of these through the long ages have built up a real mountain, much of it of snowy whiteness, other parts beautifully colored, and the whole a succession of the most fantastically shaped terraces, the exquisite beauty of which no written or spoken words can describe. While the waters here, as everywhere else in the Park, are absolutely transparent, and one can see down through them where the light shines as readily as through the rare mountain air, the colorings of the interior coral-like formations making them seem pools filled with waters of every hue.

In every part of the Park are found boiling springs or steam vents from the eternal fires which seem to rage below the whole region, and the number of isolated geysers is not a few, but most of the largest and most interesting are grouped in four basins known as the Norris, the Lower, the Fountain and the Upper geyser basins. At the last named are found within the space of a few hundred acres over two hundred geysers and hot springs which have been named and many smaller ones which are nameless, the whole including a number of the largest geysers known in the world.

The Yellowstone, a short distance above the falls, is a placid stream a little larger than the Monocacy, in Maryland. A succession of rapids for half a mile and a contraction of the channel to half of its former width greatly accelerate the current and prepare it for its first plunge of 140 feet of a sheer descent at the Upper Falls. The stream, still narrowing and becoming more boisterous, now hurries forward in a succession of short plunges for a few hundred yards between beetling cliffs until it makes its mighty plunge into the depths of the profound chasm at the Lower Falls. The height of this fall cannot be ascertained with perfect accuracy, but it is known to be considerably more than 300 feet. It is usually given at 360 feet, but that is thought to be an exaggeration. Those who have seen the drop of 160 feet at Niagara can form some idea of this by conceiving a waterfall of much less volume but of at least twice the height.

The prevailing color of the giant walls which hem in the Yellowstone below the great falls is a golden yellow, (hence the name,) though it is marked and streaked in many other bright colors at numerous points by mineral exudations. The cliffs have been cut by the action of the waters into many fantastic shapes, and as we first saw it in the gathering shadows of the evening twilight it was easy to imagine the turrets and battlements of frowning old castles. Altogether it was a scene of stupendous grandeur, never to be forgotten.

Cinebar, where all railroading stops and coaching begins, is located eight miles from the Mammoth Hot Springs, the "capital" of the Park. Cinebar is looking up, of course. Lightning only strikes places with an eye in that direction; and Cinebar will be there when the time comes. It has already achieved something in the way of "progress"—a "zoo." In the rear of the only saloon, tied to a post in a yard, is a large tame bear; a playful half-grown wolf, and two or three big-eyed owls, all of which are to be seen without charge. But the information, quickly spread, that the bear displays a voracious fondness for beer—brand not important—accelerates the business in bottles of beer at the bar very perceptibly. And Bruin is as good as his reputation all the time. Thrown a tightly-corked bottle, his long claws act as so many cork-screws; in a moment the cork is thrown away, and the bear, on his haunches, squares himself for a long and satisfying "pull." When empty, the bottle is rejected in a maudlin sort of way, and the bear leans over to one side—drunk. A fresh bottle, however, sobers him on the instant, and the same performance is repeated. It comes to an end, however. A bottle of beer in that region costs a quarter; sometimes half a dollar.

"All aboard!" Homeward!

This tour of three weeks and covering some 5,000 miles was made without an accident or unpleasant incident, and amid perfect weather. It was seldom too hot, seldom too cool, and did not rain two hours altogether. It gave a sight of much country that was fair to look upon and fruitful, much that was interesting and many places that showed the impress of American thrift and enterprise, but no place was found more beautiful or richer in the gifts of a bounteous nature, or seemingly more well-doing and happy, than dear old Pennsylvania.

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14, 1891.

Editor of Compiler: Representative Wilson, of West Virginia, the chairman of the Executive committee of the National Association of Democratic Clubs, which met in New York this week, and several other members of the committee, came back to Washington much pleased. It can be stated without any violation of confidence that the meeting was in every sense of the word a successful one and that the reports received were of the most encouraging nature, showing the rapid growth of Democratic clubs to be without precedent in the annals of political organizations, and adding to the confidence which each member felt before the meeting that the man nominated by the next Democratic National Convention would be the next President of the United States.

In the absence of anything more important the resignation of the negro demagogue, Frederick Douglass, as minister to Hayti, was much discussed here this week. When Douglass was first informed by a newspaper man that his resignation had been accepted, he was disposed to blackguard the administration and the State department particularly for having forced him out of the diplomatic service, but later, probably on a promise of some other office, he changed around completely and insisted that he had been misunderstood by the first newspaper man, and that his resignation had been entirely voluntary. This is simply not so, as it has been an open secret here for many months that the State department wanted to get rid of Douglass, but that Mr. Harrison hesitated to dismiss him for fear of the effect it might have on the negro delegates to the Republican nominating convention next year. According to his own statements Douglass has spent the greater portion of his time in Hayti in pushing through private claims against the Haytian government. Notwithstanding the general belief that Mr. Blaine wishes to send a white man of ability to Hayti, in order to secure the Mole St. Nicholas for a coaling station, half a dozen negroes have already filed applications for the place, and some are reported to have made threats that Harrison dare not appoint a white man to a position that Cleveland filled with a negro. A prominent Republican told me to-day that no appointment would be made until after Congress meets.

DEM.

HON. CHARLES S. WOLFE, of Lewisburg, who filled so large a place in "independent" politics in this State, died very suddenly at the foot of the capitol grounds in Harrisburg Thursday, of disease of the heart. He was 41 years of age; leaves a wife and five children and a considerable estate.

WHEAT is advancing, and big speculations are supposed to be in the wind. Big losses may be also.

THE Republican State Convention meets at Harrisburg to-morrow; Democratic State Convention at the same place on Thursday, Sept. 3d.

MRS. JAMES K. POLK, widow of the tenth President of the United States, passed peacefully away at her home in Nashville, Tennessee, Saturday last, her age being almost 88 years. Death resulted from old age.

"WHEN there was a chance to nominate Blaine, neither Cameron nor Quay would consent to support him. Now they are utilizing the Blaine strength in Pennsylvania to score a point against President Harrison. The true friends of Blaine need to keep a close eye upon this pair of political worthies. They are deep schemers."

The above is from the Fulton Democrat. Likewise the following;

"IF all reports be true, General Gregg who has been slated by Quay for Auditor General has not always been 'a true blue Republican,' but has exercised considerable independence in voting for Democratic candidates."

THE pruning of many careless and dangerous bills by Governor Pattison, has satisfied honest people throughout the State that no mistake was made in placing him in the executive chair a second time. It must come to this everywhere at last. The history of the Republican party places that organization outside the line of probable or possible retention in public office. It must go.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, the poet, essayist and diplomat, died Wednesday, at Cambridge, Mass., aged seventy-two years. Death resulted from a tumor on the liver.

CONGRESSMAN HOLMAN, of Indiana, declares that Harrison will be re-nominated, and that it is absurd to think of Blaine as a candidate; but "that the Democratic candidate for President will be elected, no matter who he may be."

COL. HARPER, an Illinois farmer orator of note, predicts that McKinley and John Sherman will be snowed under in Ohio, as Ingalls was in Kansas.

A SHORT time ago Governor Pattison asked Comptroller Lacey that a committee of three or five citizens be permitted to assist in the examination of the accounts of the Keystone national bank of Philadelphia so that the tax-payers might have more confidence in the honesty of the investigation. The Comptroller gave his consent, limiting the examination to the moneys of the state and of Philadelphia, and the committee was accordingly appointed and is now at work. We hope to hear a long and full report of their operations by and by, but no one can entertain any hope of any of the stolen money ever being recovered. That is gone beyond recall.—Volunteer.

TERRIBLE RIDE.—Mrs. Dr. S. J. Rouse, of York, made a miraculous escape from death Wednesday morning. While crossing the track of the P. R. R. on the Gettysburg pike, near York, the 7.45 train from Hanover came along. The locomotive struck the horse Mrs. Rouse was driving and turned its head in the direction the train was running. The horse was not hurt, but continued running alongside the locomotive between it and the fair ground fence. The phaeton was dragged over the ties and ballast. The engine was not stopped until it had gone quite a distance, when the horse stopped. Train hands and passengers closed their eyes in anticipation of the dreadful sight they expected, but to their surprise found the plucky woman uninjured, save a few bruises on her face. The horse was uninjured and the phaeton escaped with broken fenders.

A TERRIBLE RUNAWAY.—On Saturday evening week, about 8 o'clock, a terrible runaway accident occurred in Jackson township, York county, on the road from Spring Grove to King's tavern. Whilst Mr. Simon Lochman and his son Cornelius, and Henry Miller, were returning home from a hard day's work on the farm of Mrs. Mary Becker, on a spring wagon, the breech-band of the harness broke, which caused the wagon to run against the horse's hind legs, and he becoming frightened, began to kick and ran down the hill at full speed. The driver, Mr. Henry Miller, losing control of the lines, the frightened horse ran away and threw the occupants out of the wagon by upsetting it. Mr. Simon Lochman fell upon a large stone and broke his neck. When picked up it was found that his brains were hanging out of the fatal wound. He died in about five minutes after the accident.

Mr. Lochman was removed to his home, near where the accident occurred. Cornelius, son, was hurt in the shoulder and hip, and Mr. Miller was slightly bruised on the knee.

Mr. Lochman was married for the third time, and his two former wives have gone before him. He leaves a wife and seven children, and a girl whom he got at the almshouse several years ago. The bereaved family have the deep sympathy of the community. Mr. Lochman's age was 54 years, 3 months and 23 days.

New Oxford Jottings.

Mr. Editor, your correspondent spent a few days last week in passing through several townships north of this place. We never saw corn fields looking so well, and are already furnishing fine roasting-ears. The corn crop in this county cannot be excelled anywhere, not even in the most fertile portions of the Cumberland Valley. We noticed corn-stalks that measured from 12 to 14 feet high, and ears 6 feet from the ground and large at that, and from two to three ears on a stalk.

World's Fair.—This stupendous exhibition to be held in Chicago, will contain treasures from every part of the universe, known to mankind, Treasures from Europe, Asia and Africa, from the frozen zones of the North, to the tropical zones of the South. East, west, north and south will all be there, represented in the grandest array, and they will be viewed by millions of people.

Gratuitous Advice.—If the ladies, in making their exit in the crowd down the steps of churches, would take hold of their dresses instead of letting them drag the space of three steps behind them, they would save themselves the inconvenience of furnishing a temporary stair carpet to those who follow. "A word to the wise" is sufficient.

THE PARENT OF INSOMNIA.—The parent of insomnia or wakefulness is in nine cases out of ten a dyspeptic stomach. Good digestion gives sound sleep, indigestion interferes with it. The brain and stomach sympathize. One of the prominent symptoms of a weak state of the gastric organs is a disturbance of the great nerve entrepot, the brain. Invigorate the stomach, and you restore equilibrium to the great centre. A most reliable medicine for the purpose is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is far preferable to mineral sedatives and powerful narcotics which, though they may for a time exert a soporific influence upon the brain, soon cease to act, and invariably injure the tone of the stomach. The Bitters, on the contrary, restore activity to the operations of that all-important organ, and their beneficent influence is reflected in sound sleep and a tranquil state of the nervous system. A wholesome impetus is likewise given to the action of the liver and bowels by its use.

MERIT WINS.—We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. J. M. Huber, Druggist. 1

A HUSBAND'S MISTAKE.—Husbands too often permit wives, and parents their children, to suffer from headache, dizziness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, fits, nervousness, when by the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine such serious results could easily be prevented. Druggists everywhere say it gives universal satisfaction, and has an immense sale. Woodworth & Co., at Fort Wayne, Ind.; Snow & Co., of Syracuse, N. Y.; J. C. An Important Letter.
MIDDLEPOINT, MD., April 13, 1891.
S. E. DUBBEL, Waynesboro, Pa.:
I have been using your Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea and Carbolic Ointment for some months past with such gratifying results, that I feel it but due you and the high merits of your preparations that I should formally express my endorsement of them. Prior to last August I had been affected with terrible itching of the skin and symptoms of dropsy were developing. My feet and ankles were swollen and I was obliged to sit in a chair the greater part of the night. My general health was very bad and I was about as miserable a being as you could well imagine. All medical treatment, including that of the best physicians outside of Baltimore, had failed to give me any relief from nine months doctoring. It was during this month (August, 1890) that your father-in-law, Elder J. F. Oller, happened at my house, who, seeing my situation, induced me to try your Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or Panacea. I accordingly ordered a few bottles with the following results: After taking it some ten days the itching that was over my whole body ceased; the sores began to dry up, and the swelling in my feet and ankles went down. But then came the great conquest. My appetite had become so keen that I could scarcely gratify it. Indeed I was afraid to eat all that my appetite craved. Nevertheless I found that everything I did eat agreed with me. My digestion increased in proportion to my appetite, and for the first time in two years I could say that I felt good. I have continued the medicine right along since, though in decreased quantities and am now using my eleventh bottle. I am feeling quite well now and can't express my thanks to your father-in-law for the visit he paid me and for calling my attention to your most valuable medicine. I think it must have been a Godsend to me in my affliction. As many people knew my situation I have constant visitors to know what the medicine is doing for me. I tell them the facts and they go to your agents for the medicine. I think I am safe in saying that I have been the means of selling two thirds of your medicine sold by your agents in this county.
Now as regards your Carbolic Ointment, I used four boxes and am safe in saying that it cured me of the worst case of piles of which I have any knowledge. I had been a sufferer from this loathsome disease for thirty-five years. Your Ointment has entirely cured me, and thus met the highest and most difficult test of merit. Yours very truly,
ELIAS GROSSNICKEL.
Elias Grossnickel is a Deacon in the Brethren's (Dunkard) church at Middlepoint, Frederick county, Md. My father-in-law, J. F. Oller, is the Elder of the church at this place, (Waynesboro, Pa.) In the face of these reliable and indisputable facts from such a reliable source, can you go amiss by using the medicine.
RETAIL PRICE LARGE BOTTLES $1.00

ARE YOU CONSUMPTIVE
Have you Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, Indigestion? Use PARKER'S GINGER TONIC without delay. It has cured many of the worst cases and is the best remedy for all affections of the throat and lungs, and diseases arising from impure blood and exhaustion. The feeble and sick, struggling against disease, and slowly drifting to the grave, will in many cases recover their health by the timely use of Parker's Ginger Tonic, but delay is dangerous. Take it in time. It is invaluable for all pains and disorders of stomach and bowels. 50c. at Druggists.

THE "real estate season" being here, it becomes all who wish to buy property to keep close watch on the advertising columns of the COMPILER; and those who have real estate to sell need hardly be told that the COMPILER is the proper medium to employ to do it well and in the best manner possible. As all who want to buy look at the COMPILER, it is plainly the interest of those who want to sell to advertise in this paper, giving details enough to do the property some justice and time enough to let the public think over what is offered in the market.

Be wise in time if you want your property to bring its best. To make it thoroughly known is to insure most bidders and the fairest chance to sell. Don't lose hundreds of dollars in order to save two or three. In nothing does judicious advertising pay better than in selling real estate.

THE GREAT ANNUAL PIC-NIC EXHIBITION.

The yearly gathering at Williams Grove of Grangers and others interested in agriculture, the extensive exhibitions connected with these annual pic-nics, the discussions upon topics close to the heart of the husbandman, the presence of men of National distinction in public affairs, and the social pleasures always a feature of these meetings, have made these pic-nic exhibitions widely famous. This year's pic-nic, beginning Monday, August 24th, and closing Saturday, August 29th, is likely to excel all its predecessors in interest and instruction.

The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad has arranged to make special low rates of fare for those attending the pic-nic and, by reason of the opening of its new line, the Harrisburg and Pittsburg Division, the facilities for reaching the Grove will be far better than heretofore. I desire to call your attention to my

SPRING RUN
BONE PHOSPHATE.

My goods are made from the BEST MATERIALS the market affords, being largely composed of ANIMAL BONE.

In order to compete with other manufacturers, I have—although a first-class article—reduced the price and am selling at a very small profit. I employ no agents, thereby giving to the consumers the advantage of the agents' fees in making their purchases. Call and examine before purchasing elsewhere. I shall deem it an especial favor to exhibit the material from which Spring Run Bone Phosphate is made.

SPRING RUN BONE PHOSPHATE is warranted pure and equal to any other fertilizer on the market.

For sale only at the SPRING RUN BONE PHOSPHATE MANUFACTORY, at Abbottstown. (Will deliver on cars for parties desiring to ship by railroad.) Address

Value of Manures.

The Experiment Station of Cornell University has made a series of investigations on the loss in stable manures by exposure in open barnyards, the results of which are summarized in bulletin 27 of that station, published in May, 1891.

In the experiments of 1890 horse manure was saved from day to day until a pile of two ten had been accumulated. This was done from April 18th to 25th. Cut wheat straw was used plentifully as bedding, the relative amount of straw and manure being 3,319 pounds of excrement and 681 pounds of straw.

Chemical analysis showed that one ton of this fresh manure contained nearly one pound of nitrogen, seven and one-half pounds of phosphoric acid and eighteen pounds of potash, making its value about $2 80, if these constituents be valued at the same rate as in commercial fertilizers.

The pile of manure thus made was put in a place exposed to the weather, and where the drainage was so good that all the water not absorbed by the manure ran through and off at once. It remained exposed from April 25th to Sept. 22d, at which time it was carefully scraped up, weighed and a sample taken for analysis.

It was found that the 4 000 had shrunk to 1,730 pounds during the six months, and analysis showed that this 1,730 was less valuable, pound for pound, than the original lot of manure. It had not only lost by leaching, but by heating or "fire fanging" during periods of dry weather and the value of the pile of 4,000 pounds had shrunk from $5.60 to $2.12—a loss of 62 per cent.

In summing up the results of this experiment, Director Roberts says: "It seems safe to say that under the ordinary conditions of piling and exposure the loss of fertilizing materials during the course of the Summer is not likely to be much below 50 per cent. of the original value of the manure."

Further experiments showed that the liquid manure from a cow is worth its much per day as the solid manure, and that the combined value of the two is nearly ten cents per day, if valued at the same rate as commercial fertilizers; that from a horse at seven cents, that from a sheep at one and one-half cents, and that from a hog at one-half cent for liberally-fed, thrifty shotes of medium sizes.

Director Roberts is careful to explain that these values will have to be modified to suit individual circumstances. What be means is that if farmers can afford to buy commercial fertilizers at current prices, then the manures of the farm are worth the prices given.

Plant Foods and Soils.

The fertility of soil depends not solely on the composition of the soils, but also upon the availability of the feed existing therein that comes within the capacity of the plants to appropriate, either by the effects of chemical reaction, or by the power of the roots, to change the composition of the soil itself. When the soil is turned over with a plow the warmth of the sun, the air and moisture is thus given free access, and certain changes are effected which render soluble some portions of the soil that are inert, and by the changes thus effected others are induced, the processes being nearly identical with those occurring in the laboratory, the difference being that the changes in the soil are not always apparent. Silicates and other insoluble matter are changed and converted into material that becomes plant food, some rapidly, and some soils slowly.

It is not to the solubility of plant food alone, however, that the plants secure their needed sustenance in every case. Experiments made at the Rhode Island experimental station throw additional light on the methods of plant feeding, as it has been demonstrated and accepted as a fact that the roots of plants are able to take even more plant food from the soil than that which water alone can dissolve, as the ends of the little rootlets have been shown to be acid and where plants are growing upon a limestone soil it is an easy matter to find some stone over the surface of which a rootlet may have furrowed a channel, which demonstrates that the rootlets are acid at their extremities, and their power to extract plant food from the soil is greater than that of water. This power of the roots to convert insoluble material into plant food is one of the factors that enter into the numerous processes that permit the soil to be increased into fertility when green manurial crops are grown and turned under, which is a restoration to the soil of that which has been derived from it by first changing the composition of the soil and converting it into plant food, the rootlets being the agents.

Not only do rootlets have the acid reaction mentioned, but the dissolving power of roots varies, as experiments with the grains have shown, oats having greater power to extract potash from the soil than has wheat, barley or rye. This variation renders it impossible to make a correct analysis of the soil, and the only method by which the farmer can satisfy himself is to experiment with various fertilizers on separate plots and note the effects of the applications, comparing them carefully, making observations frequently and recording the results until the crops are fully matured.—Philadelphia Record.

Cattle at the World's Fair.

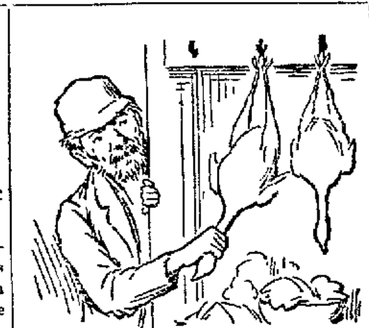

It is gratifying to learn, as we do from recent announcements, that the cattle department of the proposed Columbian Fair at Chicago is receiving much attention throughout the world; and it will probably constitute the finest exhibition of cattle ever made. The American Jersey Cattle Club and the Holstein Friesian Association have each appropriated $10,000 for showing their cattle. J. F. Sarg, of Nussdorf, Germany, who represents the Cattle Breeders' Association of Baden, the largest breeders' association on the Continent, writes that he intends to send a herd of Simmenthal cattle. These cattle come from Switzerland and are large, the cows weighing about 1,400 pounds, and often 1,600 or 1,700 pounds, or more. They are white, and marked with large, irregular and sharply defined spots or bars of red, yellow or drab color. They are nicely shaped, have fine bone, head and skin, and should make a good impression, though they are probably no improvement to the breeds now found in America.

APPLES that do not keep well in winter should be converted into cider, and then into vinegar. Some varieties of apples will not keep over winter under any system of storage, and unless a market can be found for them at the time they are harvested they will be a loss. Good cider vinegar, however, is always in demand, and it will keep until a favorable time for selling arrives.

THE heavy weight of fruit is sometimes detrimental to the trees in causing large limbs to break. Should this happen, saw off the limb and apply grafting wax to protect the injured parts.

GOOD drainage permits the soil to become warm to great depth. Excess of water cools the ground by evaporation, and the water may also become stagnant in the soil when the subsoil is so heavy as to compel the water to remain near the surface. Both surface draining and under draining are beneficial.

EITHER fall or spring planting may be adopted, but for the strawberry spring setting is surest and safest. Do not let a strawberry bed run over two years.

After dinner, if you have discomfort and suffering, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, or Anti-Bilious Granules. They're made to assist Nature in her own way—quietly, but thoroughly. What the old-fashioned pill did forcibly, these do mildly and gently. They do more, too. Their effects are lasting; they regulate the system, as well as cleanse and renovate it. One little Pellet's a gentle laxative; three to four act as a cathartic. They're the smallest, cheapest, the easiest to take. Unequaled as a Liver Pill. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the stomach and bowels, are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, because they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You only pay for the good you get.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST SUNSTROKE.

The State Board of Health has just issued the following precautions against sunstroke:

CAUSES.

This dangerous illness is caused by excessive heat of the blood (from 100° to 110° Fahr.), which produces great depression of the nervous system. It occurs during the hot season of the year, and usually to those exposed to the hot sun, but it sometimes occurs at night, and also to those exposed to great heat, in glassworks, laundries, furnaces, bakeries, iron foundaries, and the engine rooms of steamships. It is largely confined to the hot, close streets and passages of the cities, but is not unknown in the country. Those habituated to the use of alcohol, and the debilitated, are especially predisposed to attacks.

PRECAUTIONS.

Dark, close-fitting clothing and such as compresses the chest and neck should be avoided during the heated term. For those obliged to labor in the sun, light clothing and a straw or light felt hat, permitting free circulation of air, are preferable.

On very hot days, one should drink frequently, but in small quantities. A large amount of ice water, cold beer, soda water, mineral water or other iced drink entering the stomach at one time, is injurious.

Cool water, into which oat meal has been stirred, is a safe and refreshing drink. Water should not be drunk in considerable quantities at a lower temperature than spring water, namely, 56° Fahrenheit. Immediate death is often caused by "ice cold" drinks. The immoderate use of alcoholic beverages is also dangerous.

The sleeping-room should be freely ventilated and cool. Constipation of the bowels should be avoided. When over-heated, work slowly, frequently cooling the head, chest and back with cold water. Keep a wet cloth or some green leaves in the hat on the head, frequently wetting them with cold water. When, on a very hot day, the skin becomes dry and uncomfortably hot, a burning sensation is felt in the head, and the face is flushed and the eyes blood-shot with frequent tendency to urinate, the person should immediately quit work, retire to a cool place and rest in quietness; and if not speedily relieved from sensation of heat, take a cold bath.

SYMPTOMS.

The attack may be very sudden and take the form of delirium in which the patient rushes wildly about and may attack those around him; or he may become weak and sink to the ground as if in a fainting spell or stupor. Loss of consciousness and mental disturbance may be only partial. Nausea or sickness at the stomach often precedes the onset. Convulsions may occur.

Sunstroke must be carefully distinguished from Heat Exhaustion, in which the general symptoms are similar to those of sunstroke, but the bodily temperature is below the normal. The difference can be at once recognized by feeling the skin underneath the clothing; in sunstroke the skin feels burning hot; in Heat Exhaustion it is cold.

TREATMENT.

1. Carry the patient into a cool and shaded place, where there is plenty of pure, fresh air.

2. Strip his clothing to the waist, and place him in a recumbent position.

3. Pour cold water (ice water is best) upon his head and chest until consciousness returns. The points at which the blood may be most effectually cooled are the wrists, the temples, and the ears, because at those points it approaches the surface more nearly in considerable quantities. Ice may be applied to the head and chest and rubbed over the body, but if the skin is cold no ice should be applied. Internally, small doses of brandy may be administered with success; but in all cases of sunstroke the patient should, as soon as possible, be placed in charge of a competent physician.

The patient should do no mental work for some months and should keep free from all excitement. Persons who have once suffered from sunstroke are liable to a second attack. Insanity, in some of its varied forms, frequently follows sunstroke.

In Heat Exhaustion give alcoholic stimulants and place the patient in a hot bath, so as to raise the bodily temperature.

Fatal Rattlesnake Bites.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 10.—The body of Miss Lulu Bowling was found Saturday morning in the woods near Bradyville, Cannon county. The young woman had been bitten in a dozen places by a rattlesnake, as was shown by as many discolored places on her body, which was badly swollen. Coiled up beside the body was the reptile which had caused the young woman's death. It was killed. It measured five feet and had eighteen rattles and a button, and was one of the largest rattlesnakes ever seen in the county.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—William P. Ellet, of Philadelphia, who was visiting his father, H. M. Ellet, near Normanock Gap, Sussex county, N. J., died there a few days ago in terrible agony from the effects of a rattlesnake's bite. A little boy who was picking blackberries one morning in the latter part of July came across two large rattlesnakes and called to Mr. Ellet to kill them. One of the snakes took refuge under a stone. The lad pointed out the wrong stone, and Mr. Ellet picked up the stone under which the snake was hidden. The reptile buried its fangs in the middle finger of Mr. Ellet's hand. He paid no attention to the bite until he had killed the snake, which was nearly five feet long. He then started for home, sucking the wound on the way. When he reached his father's house he could get no whisky or other antidotes, and when a physician arrived, an hour later, his arm was terribly swollen to the shoulder and much discolored. Across his right side and the middle of his back the skin was very black, and his stomach had by this time been so affected by the poison that it would not retain any medicine. Mr. Ellet's agony during the next twenty-four hours was beyond description, and his death was hourly expected. The poison then yielded in a measure to the powerful antidote, but last week he grew worse and died.

A SINGLE row of raspberries will provide sufficient fruit for a family if well manured, but a dozen rows that have received no attention will fail to give even a mess. The raspberry responds well to good treatment, but fails when it is neglected.

ACCORDING to the reports from Ohio and Indiana, Dr. Johnson's classic definition of oats should be amended to read: "Oats are food for horses in England and for men in Scotland and for grasshoppers in the United States."

THE Legislature in Maine has enacted a law which requires all public school teachers to devote some time each week to teaching kindness to animals.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
